

ELLIS UNIVERSITY

Chicago Region

- AAS in Legal Studies

Ellis University has informed the Illinois Board of Higher Education of its intent to offer courses leading to an Associates of Applied Science degree in Legal Studies: Major in Legal Studies from their online campus.

Associates of Applied Science in Legal Studies degree program offer a substantive and practical exposure to the law. The courses provide students with the tools necessary to be effective to understand and apply the law. The program is designed for entryway to a career as a working professional and a stepping stone for those who may continue to seek a degree that will enhance their current career paths. Students take the Introduction to Paralegal Studies Course, then all core and specialization courses, then the Capstone Course. Legal Studies courses provide students with practical skills in areas such as torts, civil litigation, and research writing. This program infuses real-world, hands on application of theoretical concepts so that students may apply concepts to the current law office environment.

Ellis University programs are scheduled in an online format for the convenience of working adults.

Requests for additional information about the program should be directed to Dr. John LaNear, Provost, Ellis University, 111 North Canal Street, Suite 455, Chicago, IL, 60606.

ELLIS UNIVERSITY

Chicago Region

- BA in Legal Studies

Ellis University has informed the Illinois Board of Higher Education of its intent to offer courses leading to a Bachelors of Arts degree in Legal Studies: Major in Legal Studies from their online campus.

Bachelors of Arts in Legal Studies degree program offer a substantive and practical exposure to the law. The courses provide students with the tools necessary to be effective to understand and apply the law. The Bachelors of Arts in Legal Studies degree program offers a substantive and practical exposure to the law. The courses provide students with the analytical and critical thinking tools to understand and apply the law. The program is designed for working professionals who seek a degree that will enhance their current career paths while broadening and deepening their existing legal strengths. Students take the Introduction to Paralegal Studies Course, then all core and specialization courses, then the Capstone Course. Legal Studies courses provide students with practical skills in areas such as torts, civil litigation, and research writing. This program infuses real-world, hands on application of theoretical concepts so that students may apply concepts to the current law office environment.

Ellis University programs are scheduled in an online format for the convenience of working adults.

Requests for additional information about the program should be directed to Dr. John LaNear, Provost, Ellis University, 111 North Canal Street, Suite 455, Chicago, IL, 60606.

ELLIS UNIVERSITY

Chicago Region

- MS in Management

Ellis University has informed the Illinois Board of Higher Education of its intent to offer courses leading to a Masters of Science in Management, with specializations in Leadership, Project Management, Non-Profit Management, Health Care Administration and Marketing from their online campus.

The Masters of Science in Management degree program offers an academic grounding in management theories and their application to business practices, and provides decision-making tools with a process orientation. The program is designed for working professionals who seek a degree that will enhance their current career paths while broadening and deepening their existing managerial strengths. All students will complete a minimum of 27 semester hours of course work. To meet core requirements for the degree program students must demonstrate the knowledge, skills, and dispositions related to advanced managerial theories, governance and strategic decision making. Students take the Cornerstone Course, then all core and specialization courses, then the Capstone Course.

Ellis University programs are scheduled in an online format for the convenience of working adults.

Requests for additional information about the program should be directed to Dr. John LaNear, Provost, Ellis University, 111 North Canal Street, Suite 455, Chicago, IL, 60606.